Call to Action Growth

I found it to be very ironic that this week's discussion is about growth. Recently I rediscovered one of my favorite childhood actors, Devon Werkhander, has decided to start a life guide web series recently. In the first iteration of the he talks specifically about growth. On phrase that really stuck out is "We should stop asking ourselves 'Why is this happening to me?' and ask 'How is this happening for me?'" By simply changing the wording of a sentence it has an entirely new meaning.

In my journey I have constantly compared my self to my colleagues and friends and asked my self "Why am I not where they are?" I would become upset as I see others my age progressing in life and my status would remain the same, It be came very frustrating at times. Now, I can simply change my perspective and it becomes an entirely different situation. Instead of comparing my situation I can ask my self "How can I get to where X is?"
