Week in Review 4

This week I spent time looking up phrases that portray growth. I happened to find a video from one of my favorite actors that spoke on the same topic as this week's discussion. I the quote that I chose was very different, yet it spoke volumes. It described how changing your perspective on any situation can help you grow and evolve throughout life.

In Career Modules, I finished work on my LinkedIn profile and posted it for the class to review. I also read over information about how to get my personal brand out there for other people to see. I found it very interesting that by changing the file name of a picture can actually make it easier to appear in a Google search! That's one thing that I will definitely employ when creating my own websites.

With my portfolio, believe I put the finishing touches on my portfolio and loaded the last required documents for this course.
